Description of Property and Eligibility Determination (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The Hangar Club is a one-story commercial brick building with a two-story addition. The main building has the main entrance at the front elevation and a large window with single pane glass. Vertical wood beams stretch across the façade and serve as hang-up boards for advertisements. The roof slopes slightly toward the front of the building. The addition is located at the southern end of the main building and is designed with a flat roof. A gated entrance is located along the main elevation.

The pre and post World War II years in Prince George's County saw a large increase in the population due to the influx of wartime workers and the close proximity of the northern portion of the county to the nation's capital. The establishment of Andrews Air Force Base in 1942 led to both military and civilian developments. The automobile allowed expansion beyond the traditional town design and as the post-World War II era progressed, new road construction resulted in the suburbanization of the previously sparsely-settled portions of northern Prince George's County. Maryland Route 5 (Branch Avenue), constructed in 1950, served as a major artery around the western edge of Andrews Air Force Base. By 1950, Prince George's County's population had risen to 193, 799 persons, more than
